

Alex -> Johan

Johan's game was very good and well made. I did not find any noticeable bugs, and gameplay was very smooth and responsive. The only thing was the theme was kind of weird, being Pewdiepie versus T-Series, and the background was very cluttered. However, these are not major complaints, and overall the game was very fun and enjoyable, with all features working correctly.

Response:

I decided to make the background for the last levels a bit simpler in response to your suggestion. Now, the last levels don't have any lightning and only have rain and a random two colored background. Therefore, the background is slightly less cluttered. Additionally, I added hearts that you could get to get more lives so that the game was a bit easier. Thank you for the kind response.

Tony Xin -> Johan

I really liked Johan's project. It is very fun to play but I find it slightly too hard. There are 50 levels and you only have three lives to beat them. I recommend adding a way to get more lives. All in all, the game has no noticeable bugs and I enjoy the creativity of the backgrounds in the first levels. The backgrounds get repetitive in the end so I recommend removing them.

Response:

I agree that the game is too hard. I decided to add hearts that float around that give you extra lives if you land with the ship on them. Therefore, it is easier to have enough lives. Now, it is much easier to get enough lives to beat the game. I decided to make the background for the last levels a bit simpler in response to your suggestion. Now, the last levels don't have any lightning and only have rain and a random two colored background. Therefore, the background is slightly less cluttered. Thank you for the kind response.